A Journey of Loss and Resilience: Navigating Motherhood with Centro Tepeyac's Support

Dear friend,

To begin the New Year, we'd like to share a recent client story with you. Your support continues to be invaluable and we thank you for all that you do!

"I visited Centro Tepeyac during my pregnancy with my daughter, Gianna. They assisted me in applying for health insurance and supported me throughout my prenatal care. As I learned I would be a mother to two girls, the counselors maintained frequent contact. When I expressed concerns about reduced fetal movement, they advised me to go to the nearest hospital promptly. It was then that I discovered one of my babies had a health issue, and sadly, one of them did not survive. Despite the heartbreaking loss, one baby survived with a cleft lip. I spent over 12 weeks in the hospital to ensure her survival. Throughout this challenging time, Centro Tepeyac continued to offer support through phone calls, encouragement, and prayers when I needed them the most."

Speaking to Students at St. Jude Regional Catholic School

"The bread you store up belongs to the hungry; the cloak that lies in your chest belongs to the naked; the gold you have hidden in the ground belongs to the poor." – St. Basil the Great

Educating children on the significance of taking action to support mothers in need is a crucial step in fostering compassion for the unborn. By instilling a sense of responsibility at a young age, we empower the next generation to make a positive impact on the lives of the unborn. The initiative to donate diapers, wipes, and baby clothes during Catholic Schools Week not only provides tangible assistance to mothers facing challenges but also cultivates a culture of generosity among the students. This act of charity not only addresses immediate needs but also imparts lasting lessons on empathy, solidarity, and the transformative power of standing up for those in need.

Executive Director Julie Kilmer (pictured right with 5th and 7th grade) had the great privilege of visiting St. Jude's recently to thank the students for their support and share more about the impact of their generous hearts. It was a pleasure to speak with them and we hope to visit again in the near future!
